In recent years, I have developed educational projects aimed at adolescents and families, with the purpose of creating a common language among schools, parents, and students, as well as supporting an emotionally conducive environment for development.

WAPP World Association for Positive and Transcultural Psychotherapy (WAPP)

I have addressed topics in response to current social movements: war, conflict, and, more recently, balancing the virtual and emotional worlds in schools and life. These projects have been implemented nationally and internationally through educational campaigns involving teachers and parents, summer schools, radio appearances, and media outreach-podcast, social media pages, TV shows. Their impact has attracted the interest of the Romanian Senate's Health and Communications, Information Technology, and Artificial Intelligence Committees, bringing us closer to integrating tools that support national-level changes in education and schools.

At the same time, my commitment to spreading PPT concepts continued through projects for oncology hospitals, and most recently, within Romania's First Menopause Institute, where I work as a Psychotherapist and PPT Trainer.

These projects, along with others based on the topics described, could be expanded within the PPT community through training sessions offered to our members and through workgroups that have the potential to make a social impact in education and balanced life.

Together with the working group in the Influence Committee alongside the WAPP Board, we have generated project ideas that have brought us closer to our colleagues in the international community, and I wish to continue using this approach to involve more specialists in discussions and development.

I believe that a PPT Education Department could be a major asset to our community.
